

METROLOGY PROCESS FOR ENHANCING IMAGE CONTRAST

Abstract

A metrology process for increasing image contrast of a buried feature, comprising milling a selected surface of a substrate to expose a cross section of the buried feature; exposing the exposed cross section with a gas mixture, wherein the gas mixture comprises a fluorine bearing compound; and irradiating the exposed cross section with a high energy beam to increase image contrast of the buried feature.